Headlong Leaps Into Love...

Best Lesbian Romance 2010

Edited by Radclyffe

"Love is one of those rare experiences that engage us on every plane—the mind, the heart, the spirit, and the body. The totality and intensity of the sensation probably explains why love and romance are such powerful drivers in our lives, urging us to connect deeply and intimately with others without reservation."

—from the Introduction

Take a chance on love with the recklessly passionate collection of short stories in Best Lesbian Romance 2010. Erin O'Riordan's "Soaked" captures the wild exuberance and agonies of young ardor. The narrator of Jacqueline's Applebee's "I Never Thought of Love" learns that life-changing relationships don't always arrive with fanfare but can sneak up on us. Best Lesbian Romance 2010 revels in love at first glance and broken hearts healed by the power of love.

RADCLYFFE is an award-winning author of numerous lesbian romances and received the 2003/04 Alice B. Toklas award for her body of work as well as a Lambda Literary Award. Previously combining a full-time private clinic with writing books, she has since retired from medicine to devote herself full-time to writing and running her publishing house Bold Strokes Books. She currently resides in upstate New York.
